

MIAMI'S BEST NEW RESTAURANTS OF 2016

By MATT MELTZER

Updated On 12/31/1969 at 07:00PM EST

@mmeltrez

In a year where Cleveland could call itself the "City of Champions" and someone actually said Florida had the second-best drivers in the country, pretty much everything we thought about the world has been turned upside down. And wait, something else happened this year. Oh right, South Florida got its most diverse new crop of restaurants in history. Everything from a burger spot slinging peanut butter and jelly chicken wings, to a guy named Memphis crushing the poke game. And there was even something called Vietnamese-Cajun fusion. We've had some greats and some oddballs, but in the surreal year that was 2016, these were the best new restaurants that opened.

JWB PRIME STEAK AND SEAFOOD

HOLLYWOOD

Prime steakhouses in Miami have become almost as ubiquitous as people who refer to their occupation simply as "entrepreneur." So to set itself apart, this meat palace at the Margaritaville resort, named after one James William Buffett, has complemented its extensive menu of prime cuts with fresh, caught-that-day-by-spear seafood and a raw bar that literally takes up the entire front of the restaurant. But what clinches its spot as one of 2016's best is the secret sushi list that you won't find anywhere on the menu you're handed... but ask your server and you'll be treated to some of the best in South Florida.